the better traits of character are frequently met with, but these, whilst relieving the picture in a measure with their bright tints, only render the more conspicuous the lamentable common exhibitions of traits that are the very opposite of those which are inseparable from the characteristics of the true gentleman or tady. Possibly the portrayal of some of these exhibitions occasionally in our local solumns, bitions occasionally in our local columns, may do good in the way of enabling cer-tain people to "see themselves as others see them." Not to refer to some of the grosser offences against the common rule of propriety, it will serve the present pur pose to give the following illustration drawn from real life of a phase of grasping unmitigated selfishness, which is no by any means uncommon in our stree ear: in full health and vigor, with several small children able to stand alone. The car is crowded, and people standing up. A kind hearted man gives up his seat to

A kind hearted man gives up his search the young mother, expecting that she will occupy the seat herself, and possibly take one of her children on her lap. But not so. Without as much as a "thank you, sir," the mother appropriates the seat by standing little John Henry and his two year old sister, plump upon the cush-the little dears can get a first-class view of the outside world from the open car window. Having thus appropriated one seat, the selfish woman takes a deliberate scat, the senish woman takes a denorate survey of the surroundings, prospecting evidently upon the chances of getting an-other seat for herself. Nor is she mistaken.

A meek, elderly gentleman, with a bun-dle on his lap—one of your true gentle men, made up not merely of outside show in the way of fine cloth, showy neckti and glittering jewelry, but one whose claims to the gentlemanly character are substantiated by acts that spring out of thoughtfulness and consideration for oth-

Ferrel, Centre Wheel-THE OPENING.—Many extravagant re-ports have been put in circulation within the last few days in relation to the prices to be charged for seats in the New Opera lot of Braided Sacks, at E. Emsheimer's House during the opening week. The 1106 Main street. reports were, altogether likely, started by interested parties who knew full well that Manager Fitzsimmons had only to set his price at two or three dollars per seat, and store all the secretions to healthy action, he would get it. In fact he was urged to and expell all impurities from the sys do so, to avoid the rush. But Mr. Fitz simmons said no. He is not opening the Opera House for a day or a week or and Cloth Turbans, at Jerry Cle a month, but for a season, for a full corner of Main and 11th states. winter's campaign, and he did not, in the first place, care to gain the ill will of his patrons, and, in the second place, he did not feel like imposing upon the people. In fact Manager Fitzsimn 2 Five Octave Organs is not that kind of a man. So he has adopted low popular prices, lower prices der Washington Hall. than such performances as he will give could be seen for in any Eastern city. The prices will be as follows: One dollar for call at Jerry Clemmens'. He has got the orchestra chairs, seventy-five cents for largest assortment of Ladies', Misses', dress circle, and fifty cents for the family Children's and men's Shoes in the city. Call and examine.

We are glad the rumors affoat are untrue, and are also glad that the prices adopted are so liberal.
